FATHER'S TELEGRAM IS IDENTIFICATION OF MURDER VICTIM

Parent Wires From New York for Body of Thos. Clayton.

Detective in Hanford Working Case of Fitzgerald, Times Suspect.

HANFORD, Oct. 24.—Identification in full of Thomas Clayton, who was recently murdered in this city, by Jack Ward, an ex-convict, was probably secured today, and Michael Clayton, at 70 E. 12th street, Bronx, New York, wired for particulars of the death, and then sent instructions that the body of the man be shipped to New York City. The message received by Thomas Clayton today read: "Wire collect full particulars regarding death of Frank Clayton, now unidentified. Await instructions." The instructions came soon after the coroner's compliance with this request.

Depositions are being taken here by a Los Angeles detective with the purpose in view of securing out a warrant for Morris Fitzgerald, recently taken from here to Los Angeles as a suspect in the Los Angeles Times dynamiting outrage. The detective is one of the two who worked on the case here, right after Fitzgerald, in an unconscious condition, had been taken to the hospital here, presumably following a fall from a northbound Santa Fe train. It is understood that the Los Angeles authorities refuse to hand Fitzgerald without a warrant. The man was spirited away from here rather mysteriously, and no warrant has been issued in this county. Suspicion was directed to Fitzgerald by the fact that he was found here under mysterious circumstances the morning after the dynamite disaster.

Clark W. Dwyer and Miss Gertrude Clark were united in marriage in this city today. Justice W. W. Ferguson performed the ceremony.

Jacob Arkinjian, Who Drank Acid, Is Buried; Visaliam Dies.

VISALIA, Oct. 24.—The funeral of Jacob Arkinjian, an Armenian, who committed suicide near the Redbank orchard, thirteen miles northeast of this city, by drinking carbolic acid, was held yesterday afternoon in this city from the Brooks undertaking parlors, the interment being in the city cemetery.

RHEUMATISM PAINFUL & DANGEROUS

Rheumatism is due to a diseased condition of the blood cells and corpuscles, brought about by an excess of uric acid in the circulation. It is not only a very painful disease but an extremely dangerous trouble. The uric acid, secreted by the blood gradually forms a coating over the muscles, and by depositing a cement-like substance in the joints frequently terminates fatally, or leaves its victim a hopeless cripple. It is natural to "doctor" the spot that hurts, and it is quite right to use liniments, hot applications, etc., to get temporary relief from a painful joint or swollen tendon; but Rheumatism is not a skin disease, and such things, when depended on alone make one careless, and the disease gets a firmer hold on the blood. S. S. S. cures the disease because it is the greatest of all blood purifiers. It goes into the circulation, and removes every particle of the irritating uric acid, builds up the blood, and in this way prepares it for the proper nourishment of all joints, muscles, nerves and bones. If you have Rheumatism, get the uric acid out of the blood by taking S. S. S., a purely vegetable medicine, and enjoy freedom from its misery. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice free to all who write.

CHANCE ENDS DRAMATIC MOUNTAIN HUNT FOR LARCENY SUSPECT

Porterville Officers, After False Clue, Stumble on Coveted Quarry.

Hindus Tabooed at Nursery by Petition; First P. N. E. Train Runs.

PORTERVILLE, Oct. 24.—After a dramatic chase through the mountains Sunday afternoon evening, Officers Isham and Maston of this city captured Chris Johnson, a farm hand of Corcoran, who is alleged to have stolen a horse and an $80 saddle on the 18th of October from John Quinn, for whom he worked at Corcoran.

After Johnson's disappearance from the Quinn ranch and the simultaneous disappearance of the horse and saddle, a description was dispatched of the wanted man to all the officers of this county. It was stated that a reward of $50 would be paid for the arrest of Johnson and the seizure of the property.

Sheriff Buckner of Kings county phoned to the local officers Saturday that Johnson had been seen in the outskirts of Exeter and warned them to be on the lookout.

Nothing further was heard of the alleged fugitive until on Sunday morning, W. H. Neal, the telephone agent at Springville, to whom a description had been given, called the local officers and stated that a man answering the description of Johnson was in the Springville mountains. Thereupon the two local officers took the trail.

Arriving at Springville they learned that the suspected man had taken the road to Hot Springs and was headed toward the pass over the mountains to Leno. This latter circumstance led the officers to believe they were hot upon the right trail. When they overtook the quarry, he and what while strongly resembled Johnson, he was not the man wanted.

As Isham and Maston were returning down the North Fork mountain road, ahead of them on the trail they saw the man for whom they had secured the mountains. He was on the way to Hot Springs, and they were having been misled had missed the trail. But for the coincidence of another having been through Springville who bore a remarkable resemblance to the wanted man, Johnson might easily have gotten away.

More than 200 resident property owners, who are the owners of the tract, petitioned Johnson to leave the tract, and the petition was signed by C. A. Buswell, the owner of the Zante Heights nursery, asking that he be hereafter employ only white labor upon his place north of this city and that he be in the future carefully excluded from all employment. Mr. Buswell took the petition in good grace and has agreed that Hindus will in the future be given no employment.

Feeling here runs very high against those who have given employment to the Hindus, and who have taken the road to Hot Springs, and they are now endeavoring to close the road to the Hindus to edge in as closely as possible to the line inside of the city and the outside of the city, and the petition to Buswell.

Officers in this city and this section of the citrus district state that they fear the consequences should any grover attempt to run in the citrus groves, and that the wishes of the vast majority of the property owners and working people.

Today the first train was run on the line of the P. N. E. railroad, regular freight trains running to the orchard districts midway between this city and North. These trains will probably haul out the oranges from the upper country, and it is believed that a heavy tonnage will be brought to the citrus packing houses of this city.

Work is being rushed to complete the road as far as North before the earliest of the oranges are in, which will mean a considerable tonnage for the railroad as well as a large saving for the orchardists. The work trains have been loaned from the S. P. railroad officials and both of these trains are at work today.

Excess parking of lemons is being done in the Porterville district this year as well as in the orchard district. The fruit this season is exceptionally early, of a very high quality, strong in acid, of exceptional size and is curing with the very finest of color.

It is stated that the market has not as yet recovered from the effects of the Russian embargo and that good prices will prevail for the entire year.

TO REACH DECISION ON HOTEL SATURDAY

Final decision as to what is to be proposed by the Fresno Hotel company will probably be reached on Saturday. The present proposition is to have the contractor who undertakes the work take a block of stock, as a means of solving the financing problem. The company recently found that it would have to raise some $20,000 additional if it should build the hotel as planned. On the contingency of raising this, it has been understood the whole matter of whether the hotel shall be built depends.

The delay obtained is very much appreciated by the defense, as subpoenas in the case were served only a week ago, the very short date being a hindrance to the lawyers could have been made.

EPIDEMIC OF CONTAGIOUS DISEASES NOW IS WELL CHECKED

General Condition in City and County Is Good, Say Health Officers.

Russians Who Disregard Quarantine Regulations to Go to Pesthouse.

The wave of contagious diseases in the county, coincident with many more cases of typhoid than usual at this season throughout the coast, has been checked. From points outside of Fresno there have been only a few cases reported in the past week, when a patient came to Fresno without knowing she had typhoid. She was removed to the quarantine cottages at the county hospital, and as she has been living alone for the past week, it is not thought that the disease will be spread by her, since Health Officer Dr. Long of this county.

As the Russians in the infected district "across the track" decline to observe quarantine regulations, cases of diphtheria hereafter will be sent to the pest-house, or quarantine cottages on the county hospital grounds. Two same persons in the last two days, and the absolute disinfectant shown by the foreigners for quarantine regulations has caused the city health officers to lose patience. In one instance two Russian men were released after fumigation, with the express understanding that they should not return to their infected homes. In two instances the men, according to report, returned to their homes under cover of darkness to spend the night there.

There have been no cases of contagious diseases in the city outside of the Russian section for some time, and the general condition of the city is considered good. The condition in Russian town will not endanger the rest of the city, stated Dr. Aiken, the city health officer, yesterday afternoon.

County Health Officer Dr. Long yesterday issued a warning against sending or receiving letters from infected persons, and especially from those who are suffering from diphtheria. He stated that the danger of transmission of disease some time ago in this county, when a letter was received by a boy in a perfectly healthy family from a place near the Oregon line where the writer's family was just "getting over" several attacks of diphtheria. The writer mentioned this fact, and a brother of the recipient at this point snatched the missive and burned it in the kitchen stove, despite the angry pleadings of the boy. Even this precaution was of no avail, as soon most of the members of the family were taken down with diphtheria, and the boy who snatched the letter died. Through the milk supply coming from the ranch of a local creamery a large part of the community was endangered, as well as the mail service employees who handled the letter. The mailing of letters from quarantined houses is strictly prohibited by the local regulations, but the laws at times are broken, sometimes ignorantly, by the persons quarantined. Their carelessness endangers the lives of many. Mail deliveries can be made to quarantined places only by throwing the mail matter over the fence.

Dr. Long also repeated yesterday his warning not to use irrigation canals, ditches or other flowing water. All cess-pools, toilets, carcasses of animals, etc., must not be near irrigation ditches, according to law. The nearest limit allowed for a cess-pool to a ditch is 200 feet.

Health and Beauty Talks

BY MRS. MAE MARTIN.

Miss M. G. It is not necessary that your face reflect your age. You could easily have a much more, clearer, smoother and more youthful complexion if you quit using powders and tried a good lotion. Dissolve four ounces of epsom salt in a half pint hot water, and add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine. Apply this to your face, neck, and arms, and it will improve your looks wonderfully. It will soften and whiten your skin and remove that shiny, greasy, sallow look. This inexpensive lotion will not rub off like powder, and is very beneficial in preventing and removing freckles and skin pimples, and makes a wonderful skin beautifier. You can get anything I recommend at almost any drug store.

B. Sisters. If the patrons of your "beauty parlors" object to shampoos made from soap on account of the great danger of the soap alkali running the later of the hair, try a shampoo made by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water, and after shampooing rinse the hair as usual. Canthrox makes the most satisfying shampoo imaginable and leaves no bad effects. It lathers splendidly and is the best and most thorough scalp cleanser I have ever seen. It relieves scalp irritation, and leaves the hair

PLANS FOR ROAD MEN

Well Attended Meeting of Republicans Held at Laton.

An audience of approximately 130 attended the Republican rally held at Laton last night by the county central committee.
W. J. Ochs, the candidate for supervisor from the fourth district, in speaking of what he intended to do if elected, stated that he had made no campaign promises, but that if elected he would go to the leading citizens in each community in his district and ask them to recommend road men. In this way, he said, the people could choose their own men and would be responsible for any failure on the part of those appointed to make good.
A. M. Drew amplified to some extent his discussion of the alien land measures, especially in his reference to the proposed bill to introduce in the next legislature. He declared that he intended to introduce the same bill that was defeated at the last session.
All the legislative and county candidates were present at the meeting and all made addresses.
The Republicans will meet tonight at Reedley and a caucusing meeting is being planned. Orlis Turner will accompany the candidates and render several campaign songs.

JAP FINDS RAZOR

POOR DAGGER FOR HARI KARI RITUAL

Lacking the little dagger which tradition says the Samurai warriors of old Japan always carried in case honor might require self immolation, Kogi Kawanahara, a Japanese of Reedley, yesterday afternoon attempted to commit hari kari with an occidental razor. While the attempt was accompanied with the formality of old time custom, Kawanahara failed to accomplish his purpose with his improvised dagger, and the surgeons at the county hospital say he has a fair chance to recover. The wound inflicted was a vicious one, and shows that the effort he made to disembowel himself was an earnest one.
Kawanahara was rushed to Fresno on the train after he had stabbed himself, and word was sent ahead to have an ambulance waiting. He was removed to the county hospital without delay. His health is said to have induced extreme melancholia.

After his speech Saturday night at the Laton, he addressed the local order on "Fraternalism," and gave a detailed account of the recent grand tour at St. Louis banquet was served and all enjoyed an informal program.

KILLED IN SCUFFLE OVER A REVOLVER

Husband Dead as Result of Trifling Disagreement With Wife.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24. While scuffling with his wife for the possession of a revolver, during a quarrel that resulted from his refusal to go to the store for some milk, Frederick C. Emery, a machinist, 40 years old, was shot through the heart tonight at his home, 134 South Olive street.

In the apartment at the time were the man's mother, Mrs. Ida Emery, and her daughter, Ethel, of Sacramento, who have been visiting here three weeks. They were witnesses to the quarrel and heard the scuffle, but did not see the revolver discharged. All the while the scuffle was in progress, Mrs. Emery is held pending a further investigation.
When the quarrel was at its height, Emery said that he was going to leave and wanted his revolver.
Mrs. Emery rushed to the bureau and seized the revolver, taking him by the arm and bawling at him. He seized her, and during the struggle the two were carried into a close out of sight of the others. It was there that the revolver was discharged, resulting in the man's instant death.

SENATOR ELKINS IS NOT SERIOUSLY ILL

ELKINS, Va., Oct. 24. Because of conflicting reports as to the condition of Senator Stephen B. Elkins, who is ill at his home here, Dr. W. W. Golden, the senator's physician, gave a statement to the Associated Press today:
"The reports that the condition of Senator Elkins is critical are wholly untrue and furthermore, at no time during his present illness has an attending physician or to the members of his family. The senator's real and quiet has done much for the senator and he is confident he will be in his seat at the opening of the Senate in December."

CHANGE OF VENUE IN FRAUD CASES
CHICAGO, Oct. 24. A new move was made by counsel for Frank R. Harrison, John M. Taylor and Charles L. Ewing, former Illinois Central officials, charged with conspiracy and operating a confidence game in the Illinois Central car repair cases, when a motion was made for the dismissal of the latter charge.
Judge Bruggenmeier in the municipal court, ruled the charge should stand, but granted a change of venue. The move came as a surprise to the prosecution, whose attorneys believed the two charges were being heard jointly. When this point was raised, the court ruled only one charge, that of conspiracy, had been on trial.

The "Digestible" Shortening.
Lard is the most commonly used cooking fat, yet not 10 per cent of the food cooked with lard digests naturally and easily; the other 90 per cent, instead of nourishing the body, merely clogs the digestive organs.
Physicians and cooking experts have long been seeking something to replace lard, and repeated tests have finally demonstrated that Cottolene is not only a pure, nutritious and wholesome as olive oil, but is even more economical than lard. Such noted authorities as Mrs. Rorer and Marion Harlan both recommend Cottolene as "much more healthful than lard."

Decision Allowing Home Run Protested; Second Game 11 Innings.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 24.—When Vernon Gregg's long drive to right field in the ninth inning bounced through a six-inch hole in the fence and gave the big pitcher a home run with a man ahead of him on the bases, the game was over. The two played today went to Portland, 4 to 3. The second game in the series with the tally 2 to 1 in favor of San Francisco until the ninth inning, when the Northerners tied the score. The next inning held the lead at even, but in the eleventh the lead was off the delivery of Miller and three runs were added. The second game of the day went to McCredie's men 5 to 2. Captain Mohler filed a protest against the umpire's ruling in allowing Gregg a home run in the first game.

MEXICAN BORDER IS TO BE FENCED

Surveyors Are Now Running Lines Intended to Stop Cattle.

EL PASO, Tex., Oct. 24.—A fence along the border between Mexico and the United States seems assured. Surveyors are now in the field and are said to be running lines for the construction of a barbed wire fence. This is intended principally to keep the cattle of each country from wandering over the line rather than to stop smuggling, as has been reported.

WANTED FOR STEALING FUNDS OF OHIO LODGE

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 24.—The governor of Ohio made requisition upon Governor Gillett today for the return of Frederick Neff, who is wanted in Franklin county, Ohio, for embezzlement. W. G. Shellenberger is authorized to take custody of the prisoner. Neff is accused of appropriating funds belonging to the Elcoto Tribe No. 22, improved Order of Red Men, which were entrusted to him as treasurer of that organization. He disappeared on January 1 of this year. It was discovered that $1,255 of the tribe was missing.

NO HURRY TO NAME DOLLIVER'S SUCCESSOR

CLARINDA, Iowa, Oct. 24.—In the course of a political speech here today, Governor Carroll made his first public reference to the appointment of a successor to the late Senator Dolliver, intimating that he would name no one until after the coming election. After calling attention to the fact that the person appointed could serve only until the legislature met, next winter, the governor said:
"I deem it but proper that no hasty action be taken and shall therefore reach no conclusion as to the matter nor give any consideration whatever to it at present."

CHAMPION ATHLETICS RECEIVE TREMENDOUS OVATION UPON THEIR RETURN FROM SCENE OF GREAT VICTORY

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 24.—The world's champions reached home from their victorious trip to Chicago this evening, and were given a rousing reception by the fans, headed by Mayor Reymann. Although extra precautions had been taken to prevent the crowd entering the Pennsylvania station, the porters outgeneraled the railroad officials. Huge gates had been erected at the entrances to Broad street station and no one was allowed to reach the train floor, who did not have a railroad ticket. Not to be outdone by this piece of strategy, hundreds lined up at the ticket windows and purchased tickets to nearby stations, thereby crowding the big station to overflowing. A hurry call was sent to the police stations and 300 policemen were soon on the scene and kept the crowd back from the entrances. When the train pulled into the station the players almost had to fight their way to the street, where twenty automobiles and the First Regiment band were waiting. Headed by Mayor Reymann, the players were escorted to the Bellevue Stratford hotel. The players were entertained at a dinner which lasted until 8 o'clock when the victors were taken to a local theater. Here they attracted much more attention than did the actors.

GUERRERA SHOOTING STILL A MYSTERY

HAVANA, Oct. 24.—The attempted assassination of Major General Pino Guerrera, commander in chief of the Cuban army, is still a mystery because of the failure to identify the suspect under arrest, who remains incommunicado at police headquarters. The newspapers agree that the story of personal animosity is entirely inadmissible and that much evidence exists pointing in the direction of a political motive. It was notorious that General Guerrera was obnoxious to certain elements in the government and much influence has been exerted to have him superseded as commander of the army by General Montague, chief of the rural guards. Col. Romulo Guerrera, inspector general of the army and brother of Pino Guerrera, says the latter fully expected that an attempt would be made on his life, as he had received many warnings not to expose himself after dark in the vicinity of the palace. General Guerrera's condition is improving but his wound is still considered serious.

CANADIAN RATES MAY BE RAISED

LONDON, Oct. 24.—A. W. Smithers, chairman of the board of directors, presiding today at the semi-annual meeting of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, expressed a hopeful view of the situation generally. The chief difficulty encountered, the chairman said, was the persistent demands for higher wages which, owing to the greater cost of living and the desire of the employees to have better conditions, had come to stay. However, as increased wages could be paid only if the road's capital were adequate, the directors might be compelled to ask permission to raise the rates, especially as the government's endorsement of the "Multi-Millionaire" Canadian Pacific Company with land had made it more difficult for the Grand Trunk to conduct its business.

HOPPE TAKES LEAD IN BILLIARD MATCH

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Willie Hoppe took a comfortable lead tonight over Albert G. Carter, Boston's expert in the first 200 point block of an 1800 point billiard match here. Hoppe, playing 18.1 to the Bostonian's 18.2, was the winner by a score of 300 to 176. The match is for a purse of $500.

FINED FOR PART IN INSURANCE FRAUDS

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 24.—A jury in the criminal court here today returned a verdict finding T. J. Needham, an insurance agent, guilty of fraud. Dr. G. C. Chitt, an insurance examiner, was acquitted of complicity in the frauds, which created a widespread sensation when they were exposed some months ago. It was alleged T. J. Needham had written policies on the lives of hopelessly diseased and aged persons without their knowledge. Insurance companies in Indiana, Iowa, and Tennessee were involved and it was said that the total of the values of policies of these "graveyard risks" was over $100,000. Needham was fined $750 following today's verdict. O'Leary some days ago entered a qualified plea of guilty, which was accepted. He, too, was fined $1,500.

SALARY LIMIT MUST NOT BE VIOLATED

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 24.—At the annual meeting of the Southern League of baseball clubs an amendment to the constitution was adopted which provides that any club guilty of a violation of the national salary limit forfeits to the league its interest in the reserve fund. The meeting will adopt a new salary limit as well as a player limit. The pennant was awarded to New Orleans.

ATTEL AND CONLEY TO MEET IN SOUTH

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 24.—Announcement was made tonight that Alie Attell, the title holder, and Frankie Conley will meet in a twenty-round bout at the West Side Athletic Club on Sunday, November 13th, for the world's featherweight championship.

VESSELS MISSING IN WEST INDIES

MOBILE, Ala., Oct. 24.—It is feared that the British schooner A. M. Lowrey from Truxillo, Honduras for Mobile with a cargo of coconuts was disabled or lost in the hurricane of last week. She is nine days overdue.

PLANS RAILROAD FROM NEW MEXICO WESTWARD

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 24.—Declaration of intention to build a railroad from Springer, N. M., to San Francisco was contained in a letter received by Secretary of State Curry today from H. S. Wanamaker, secretary of the Mountain Valley and Plains Railroad Company. Wanamaker wanted news of the incorporation laws of this state, pointing out that the railroad will cross four states and that the financing company wants its charter to be as simple as is compatible with the laws of those states. The company has its headquarters at Amistad, N. M.

CUBS DIVIDE MONEY; THEIR ONLY SOLACE

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—The only consolation Manager Chance and his players of the local National League team got out of the world's series was in the division of receipts, which occurred this afternoon. Each of the players carried away a check for $1315. Secretary Williams and Trainer Simmons were voted a share for full shares of the "money." A fine of $50, assessed against Chance for disputing a decision, was found to have been added to his expedition from the grounds during Wednesday's game. This was paid from the loser's share before the "split up" of the money.

FIFE IS TO BUILD ANOTHER SCHOONER

LONDON, Oct. 24.—William Fife, the yacht designer, has accepted a contract to build a racing schooner for a sportsman whose name is not divulged. The schooner, however, is to be a racer capable of defeating the American schooner Westward, owned by Alexander S. Cochran of New York. Sailed by Captain Charles Barr, the Westward won the feature event at the Kiel and Cowes regattas last summer.

TACOMA IS TO HAVE WASHINGTON HEARING

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Director Durand of the Census Bureau said today that the committee appointed to make protest against the census figures of the city of Tacoma, Wash., would reach this city in time to have a hearing, Wednesday. "They complain," said Mr. Durand, "that we charge the city with fraud. We have made no such allegation, but we have charged fraud in the enumeration." "We will hear them on the subject of a re-count, but I do not see how it is possible to relieve the enumeration from the charge made against them."

NO NEED OF A NAVAL BASE AT NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 24.—Secretary of the Navy George Von L. Meyer, who is here on a tour of inspection of United States naval stations, said today that he could see no reason for a naval base at New Orleans. "If there is ever to be any fighting it will not be on the Gulf of Mexico," he said, "but around the entrance of the Panama Canal. Of course none of us expect a conflict, but if it should come the canal will be the place which will need fortifying. "I do not think the Mississippi valley is in any particular danger of invasion."

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24.—Vernon closed the last series of the season between the two local teams by shutting out Los Angeles, 4 to 0. It was also Vernon's seventh consecutive victory, or the entire series. While neither pitcher showed any special unsteadiness, the ball was frequently hit, but good holding held the score down. THE CRUTCH

BY AGNES GROZIER HEBERTSON

WILLIAM was the elder son and ought to have gone upon the farm. He had the face and the form of a farmer, and Janet and Andrew Medway had often during the boy's school days pictured him striding about the fields and meadows, his blond head high, his shoulders squared, in his features some of that implacable purpose that marked his father's face. But when the hour came when the lad should quit his books and step into the place assigned him an unforeseen event occurred. William Medway declared that he would not be a farmer; that he had no desire to continue his father's fight with the land; books attracted him more and the lure they contained; if only he might go to college like Jude Cathcart, a neighboring farmer's son.

Janet and Andrew were petrified; they had not perceived any signs of the approach of this catastrophe. No doubt William had been assiduous in his studies, and they had not observed the fact. No doubt the lad had been tormented by high hopes and strange ambitions and they had been blind.

Andrew Medway said in a voice at once perplexed and pained: "Does a father ever know the mind of his child? He takes after your family, doubtless, Janet, and we never suspected it! And why not? He is as much your son as mine. Well, the lad must have his way. 'Twould be a pity to make him regret that he was born a farmer's son."

So William was sent back to school to study for a scholarship, and David, the younger son, was taken away earlier than he should have been that he might fill his brother's place. David went upon the farm. He was an odd boy, without his brother's fine physique and dominant air, but with a certain self-possession and reserve. Janet and Andrew looked at him sometimes with a regretful sigh. "He will not make the farmer his brother would have made," they said. They were careful that the boy should not hear them, and they were keen to praise the skill he had in odd ways in managing animals, in reading the skies, in learning the idiosyncrasies of the fields. If the couple were forced to kind in their praises, David did not notice. He was an absent lad, with a queer, inward look in his eyes, as if he saw in the world less what was in it than what he brought to the survey.

William did not gain the scholarship. His schoolmaster was not surprised.

"Put him on the farm, Mr. Medway," he urged. "Nature meant him for a farmer. You are making a mistake in putting his nose between the leaves of a book."

But William thought differently. He liked the atmosphere of learning, he liked—Jude Cathcart's father was sending him to college, and it was plain to see the respect that folk had for Jude for that reason. Jude would soar into a society other than that of the countryside. When he came home he would be flattered and feted. William's shiftless soul straightened itself and fought for what it desired. He had a dozen reasons—excellent reasons—to proffer why he had not won the scholarship. There were other candidates more favored than he.

"He must go to college in the ordinary way," said his father to Janet one evening as they sat in the kitchen before going to bed. "He will never settle to aught else."

Janet rested her tired head on her hand. "It is true what he says," she said. "Jude Cathcart is going, and Jude Cathcart has no better brains than he."

They both believed that without question. They would not have entertained for a moment the idea that Jude's stunted body should harbor a finer intellect than the form of their own handsome lad.

William's vague aspirations after social supremacy were mistaken for the discontent of unwonted powers.

"Cathcart is a well-to-do man," the farmer said slowly. "He need fear neither wind nor rain. But it would be odd if my son, for the sake of a little stiding, should fare less well. David will have the farm; William shall have the education. I'll go down to the bank tomorrow, Janet. 'Twill be odd not to have a bit laid by for stormy days, but we shall manage." He said again, after a moment, "We shall manage." There was about his tone a promise of future ill.

So William went to college in the ordinary way, and a hard season set in for the farmer. It was the forerunner of many hard seasons. Andrew toiled as he had never before toiled; Janet grew tired more often and began to age. David—David worked on the farm morning, noon and night now, and an old paint box, hidden away in the attic, a bundle of brushes and two or three half-finished pictures were left in their hiding place undisturbed.

William did not pass his exams with the ease that Jude Cathcart passed his. He took them a second time, sometimes a third. The couple on the farm were ignorant folk where learning was concerned and did not understand. William said nothing of his failures, and when he brought his splendor back to the farm in the vacations Janet and Andrew were thrilled with a pride that forbade them to question their idol. William was full of hope, of pride in himself, of high ambition. The grace with which he condescended blinded his parents' eyes. William was winning finely, was doing well, would make a name for himself some day. They scraped and scraped again to provide him with the extra money for which he asked. He always asked.

Jude Cathcart left college and went to London to argue in the law courts, people said, and William was still struggling with his exams.

Andrew said to a neighbor, "The courses aren't all the same, you know, and he would choose the most difficult, you may be sure, would our William."

It was a delusion that William fostered. He was beginning to work at last, bringing his will to bear upon his slow brain. There were times when he almost regretted the road that had been gained so easily, when he almost regretted the ambition that had bowed his head over so many books he did not understand or desire to understand. In such moments of weakness his thoughts traveled back to the farm. He saw David scanning with wide, gray eyes the running meadows, his lips compressed in anxious thought. David was thin and lean and wiry—and silent. Nobody thought much of David—he was but a farmer. At the latter reflection William's self-satisfaction always caught him up. He—William—had chosen the better part. He was no rustic filled with a bucolic calm, but a man of the world.

He left Oxford at last. He had taken his degree—his modesty, within a narrow margin, as it was possible to take it—and was now face to face with a necessity he had never allowed himself to face in anticipation—the necessity to keep himself, to earn a livelihood.

The fact of that necessity hurt William, and he accepted gladly an invitation proffered him by a college friend, an invitation which would postpone the evil hour of choice, of decision.

He was at his friend's house when he received news of his father's death. Andrew Medway had quitted life with an little ado, with an little ostentation, as he had lived it. He had believed implicitly in the abilities of his elder son, and in his simple mind William, having completed his university course, was provided for. His will was short. William had had the money; David was to have the farm. To David he said as he died, "Keep your money, David."

David, his silent eyes grown less shrewd with the passage of years, his features older and more sharpened than William's were, gazed with the same simplicity, "Too, father."

William was at his father's funeral. He looked shocked and grave, and there were several who had debated the wisdom of Medway's treatment of his elder son who thought better of him for his demeanor. Perhaps William Medway had more in him than they had thought, though he had allowed his father to keep him like a child all these long years and had not contributed a penny toward the expenses of the farm. Perhaps he had more feeling in him than they had imagined, too, though he had never moved a finger to help his father during vacations on the farm and had appeared not to observe the farmer's falling health. He seemed cruelly cut up at the loss he had sustained. They pitied William and, indeed, he deserved their pity. He had been fond of Andrew in his selfish fashion, and now again in an even more inevitable fashion there was the future to be faced.

"I must have time, a little time. A man must look about for a bit," he said to his mother when the funeral was over.

Janet nodded, without appearing to comprehend. Her face was stricken. She had lost her man, and in a dim fashion she comprehended that she need not have lost him thus early. Andrew in the last few years had lived too hard; he had attempted too much. Somehow these stern, strong men needed something behind them, a little money to fall back on. 'Twas the thought that the money was there that helped them. Without that comfort they suffered—they suffered in an added anxiety, the anxiety of proud men who have always paid their way. Andrew had suffered, and David—David had done all he could. David

The day passed. William had not found a task to his mind. He sought, he hardly knew for what, and—perhaps because his desires were so nebulous—he found nothing.

It was astonishing how poor an appearance he made in the labor market. His attainments impressed nobody, no eager hands were held out to him begging the fruit of his brains. There were times when a cold fear touched him on the shoulder, when he wondered, when he doubted.

And stily, furtively, covetously, he looked over his shoulder at the farm.

The farm was David's. William watched the manipulation of it. He was without practical knowledge, but something within him, a natural shrewdness, betrayed to him the truth. David was indeed no farmer, only an inherent conscientiousness and a dogged tenacity enabled him to wring from the land that which provided the small family with daily bread, and he wrung that with an effort, an effort that was lining his face and turning his hair gray while he was yet in his youth.

William said to himself: "David keeps the farm in existence merely. I could make it pay."

To be a farmer, just that, no more! Sometimes he winced at the thought of it; at other times, when that fear of the world and its lack of need of him touched him, he longed.

While he longed, while he brooded, despised and envied, he stayed on, ate the bread that the other, the poor crutch, earned. He thought to himself: "For the moment I accept his support. Once I can make a start."

David pursued his way. If he noticed his brother's continued presence it affected him but little. The farm claimed all his attention, monopolized his thoughts. He was like a machine wound up to perform a certain duty—to make the farm maintain the household—and without capacity for aught else. At times folk spoke to him tentatively of his brother's attainments; perhaps they wished to discover a hidden rancor, a doubt of William, in the mind of the younger man. They were disappointed. David agreed calmly, as one accepts the obvious, that William was brilliant, that William was of a fiber to astonish the world, that William was not meant for common things. The villagers perceived at length that David accepted his lot as inevitable; saw himself the crutch on which the weak—in the person of Janet and the too highly gifted—in the person of his brother—must depend. To question William's right to dependence had never occurred to him.

Cathcart said: "I am disappointed in David Medway. I used saw more than he knew he saw and would some day awake to knowledge.

"Well, if you have nothing to suggest," he said, and then burst out: "You out! Standing there moulting!"

David colored. He said quietly: "It is natural enough that the girl should want some prospect of a home. Couldn't you try schoolmastering?"

William blazed with contempt. "Schoolmastering?" Then he turned his head aside. "I have tried for it; I can get nothing," he muttered.

David was silent, and the elder man's wrath rose to fury. He imagined the sneer on David's lips. It would have been on his had he been David.

He was about to speak when David broke the silence. "Perhaps if you left the village, went to town?"

William turned on him. "You would drive me from the farm, is that it—the farm that ought to have been mine? You would like me to go where I should not be able to see the failure you are making of the land? No doubt you think yourself a great success and me a poor wretch who is good for nothing. Let me tell you this: Were I in your shoes—had I been in your shoes all along—things would be jolly different! You got the farm from me, and you have made a mull of it!"

"Stop!" said David. He went to the door. When he turned the other man could not read his face. It was without anger, without contempt, without any emotion that William could comprehend. It was extraordinary, but there was an aspect of youth about David: his shoulders rose, his back straightened. It was as if a burden had slipped.

David said clearly, "You may have the farm."

He went out and shut the door.

An early sun was finding out the hedges when David passed down the road on his way from the village. He bore his slight possessions with him. His eyes ran over the fields with the old rapid stare.

Amabel Chaffin stood at her gate. "David," she called as he came by, and again, "David."

He paused, and she looked into his face. "David, I'm not going to marry William," she said.

He said simply, "William's got the farm."

"Yes, I know." She leaned her chin upon the gate, and her gray eyes laughed and cried: "David, it's you, it's you! I wouldn't wait for William, but I'll wait for you."

Again he said and in a dazed tone, "William's got the farm."

He added, "He'll make a better farmer; he'll be a rich man."

"And you?"

His face burst into a glad freedom. "I'm going to paint."

She nodded, "I'll wait for you."

David leaned over and kissed her face.

When he was gone the girl stood by the gate, smiling to herself. "He'll come back," she said.

And David went into the world to seek the success that had been waiting for him through these disconsolate years.

PULLING THE MAJOR'S NOSE

WE were but six line officers at a company post in the western wilderness. We had played poker till we had won one another's money several times over, but it was the same money passing and repassing between us, and the fund hadn't increased under the operation; neither had it decreased. There was nothing to buy—neither wines, liquors nor cigars. We had brought a supply with us.

After every man of the six—the commandant didn't play poker—had been cleaned out half a dozen times, proceeded "on tal" and cleaned out every other man half a dozen times Carter, captain of my company, remarked:

"I offer $10 to any man of this crowd who will give me a new sensation."

"Make it a hundred," said Billy Kendall, second lieutenant of E company, "and I'll try."

"I'll make it a hundred if you succeed, you to pay me a hundred if you don't."

"That's fair. I'll go you once."

"Who's to decide who wins?" asked Carter.

"I'll make a more definite proposition," replied Kendall. "I'll bet you that on or about tomorrow morning I pull old Tom's nose."

Old Tom was the major, thirty-eight years old, bald, dignified, even pompous, a martinet, and his proper name was Thomas Ordway.

"Great Scott! You'll be court-martialed and shot!"

"Do you take me?"

"I certainly do, but the money will do you no good except to pay for your funeral."

"I'll risk that. Put up the funds."

Seabury, captain of F company, was made stakeholder, and he and the two first lieutenants were appointed umpires. The rest of the day was spent in wondering how Kendall was going to get out of losing his bet, for, as to pulling the major's nose, one might as well pull the nose of the secretary of war, the highest official an officer considers, except the president, who is supposed to figure into pardons. But since no one could guess what Billy was up to we finally drifted into night at an and were obliged to be content with this for the rest of the day and evening.

That night the surgeon was called up to treat Mose, the major's colored striker. He found Mose throwing up his supper of pork and hardtack. The next morning Mose remained in bed. The surgeon could not see that anything was the matter with him, but Mose persuaded him to report to the major that his striker was unable for the present to perform his duties.

Just before guard mounting Kendall sent an orderly to Captain Seabury to say that as soon as the old guard had marched off some one of the umpires was to be at old Tom's quarters ready to observe the pulling of his nose.

The major was in a bad humor that morning in consequence of the absence of his body servant and being required to get ready his own bath and perform other menial duties that were usually attended to by Mose. When the umpires heard the tramp of the guard that had been twenty-four hours on duty going to their quarters all three of them moved at different times, so as not to attract attention—to headquarters. Near the door they rallied on the center and conferred. It was agreed that Seabury should make an excuse to go in, stay as long as he could, then come out, to be replaced by one of the others. Seabury entered, asked the major some trivial question on a matter of duty and came out, reporting that the major had his coat off and his collar unbuttoned, while Kendall was stropping a razor. In a few minutes I went in and came out to report that the major was in the chair in which Mose usually shaved him. Kendall was lurking in the commandant's face. Here comes Lieutenant Rykes, who had entered in his turn, laughing and slapping his leg.

"What is it?" asked the others, crowding around him.

But Sykes was so full of laughter that he couldn't go on. Finally when he recovered somewhat he said:

"When I went in old Tom said apologetically: 'That infernal striker of mine had to get sick last night, and the surgeon reports that he can't shave me this morning. Mr. Kendall has kindly come to the rescue, and I am under an eternal obligation to him. What is it you want?'"

"Kendall," Rykes went on, "as soon as the major had finished speaking, took hold of old Tom's nose with the forefinger and thumb of his left hand and, pulling it first to one side, then to the other, looked up at me, winked and began to shave the commandant. Carter has lost."

"I believe," said Brown, "that rascal Kendall bribed Mose to be sick."

"Sure enough," chimed in Seabury. "Let's go and find Carter."

At Carter's quarters they told the story, and the captain agreed that the joke was worth the stake. In a little while Kendall came in and told how he had bribed Mose with a ten dollar bill to take an emetic, to fool the surgeon and stay in bed the next morning. Knowing how old Tom dreaded to go without a shave and couldn't shave himself, Kendall had bantered him to let him do the job.

His face burst into a glad freedom.

"I'm going to paint."

She nodded. "I'll wait for you."

To think there was something in him when he was a lad. Now he is no more than the horse that follows the carrot before his nose and pulls the merry-go-round."

Two years passed by and Janet died. She slipped after her husband as a sunbeam slips back to the sun. So imperceptibly she faded that her sons hardly knew that they had lost her when she was gone.

David grieved, but in a silent fashion, when realization came home to him. It was dreadful—she was no longer there to be provided for. David mourned for that.

Perhaps William would have suffered more than he did had he known how utterly Janet had lost faith in him before she died, how little he had meant to her, how her weakness had shrunk from his hollow brilliancy and had leaned with satisfaction upon David. The crutch, it had supported her. She was grateful. And she had discerned in its strength that which told of self-repression, of self-sacrifice, of atonement. Janet had wept sometimes. She died, hoping to understand.

William took his grief to Amabel Chaffin. He told the girl how he had loved his mother, how she had believed in him and how bitterly he missed her.

"If only she had lived to see my success," he said.

Amabel was silent for a moment. She was a slight, pale girl with eyes that in one moment laughed and were sad. Presently she asked, "What success?"

It was then that William felt his first doubt of Amabel. He had always felt certain of her, believed that as soon as he was ready to ask she would be ready to give. He was rudely disturbed.

Amabel saw that and shrank from the added ardor doubt sent into his glance. "Go and find success," she said, and left him.

William perceived then that Amabel was not altogether a visionary and a dreamer. She was like all women, he told himself. She desired a material proof of worth; she required talent to be turned into money before she could appreciate its existence.

The reflection angered him, but did not kill his desire for her. He loved Amabel, he told himself, and since she desired some proof of his ability before he declared himself to her she should have it.

He began more earnestly to seek for employment.

But his task was now more difficult. There were new obstacles in the way and chiefly the obstacle of three years of passivity. He sought and sought again. For years that old fear had not affected him. It returned now and touched him again. The touch was even more cold, and he shivered. His satisfaction with himself and his attainments vanished. He doubted.

Then some one spoke to him of Amabel. "You must leave the girl alone until you have something to offer her."

William felt both anger and satisfaction. He was angry that he should be forced to realize how paltry was all that he could offer, that he should be forced to realize, indeed, that he had nothing to offer. But it was pleasant to imagine that Amabel only required of him a home, not a proof of intellectual superiority, to lay her doubts of him.

He told David, and unconsciously as he voiced his grievances, his dissatisfaction with a world that refused to acknowledge him, that would not take him at his own price, the rancorous envy and consciousness that slept in him awakened.

David, confused by the confidence and amazed at being called upon for advice, stood stupidly staring. William hated that wide stare that was yet so penetrating. He felt always that David had done a great deal, but he was in a different mold, a more puny mold. Nature had not intended David for a farmer.

She could not get at the thought behind these reflections; perhaps it was just as well. She said, looking in a dazed fashion into the face of her elder son. "You must speak to David; David is master now."

"David?" said William. There was contempt in his tone. He, too, felt that David was not a farmer, David did not know how to speak to men so that he got their best day's work out of them. David only knew how to get a good day's work out of himself—a very different thing and a less useful gift on a farm. David, with his quiet eyes and silent tongue! William did not speak to David, but he stayed on at the farm.

David appeared not to notice his brother's presence, not to observe the idle figure that hovered about the house or swung itself over the fields finely garbed, while he—the farmer—toiled in the heat of the day. David spoke only to his mother, and his words had nothing to do with William. "Mother, mother, perhaps I did not try hard enough, perhaps I might have spared him more. There were times when I looked behind me and in a farmer 'tis a sin. But I'll never look back now; I'll never look back now."

Janet heeded him hardly as much as she had heeded his brother. She did not know what the trouble was, what lay behind his regret. She felt only that the lad was uneasy, felt he had done little, wished he had done more. She said fondly: "You did your best, David, lad. He knew that. You were the crutch of his old age; he said that many's the time."

David went away comforted and with his face writ in lines of resolution, but Janet wept. She wept at her own words and the realization of them. David had been their crutch on whom they had leaned, but William might have been more than that. With his fine body, his splendid strength, his practical head, he might have been more than a crutch to them—a weapon of defense warding from them the blows of a cruel world.

JOHNSON ASKS WHY THEODORE BELL HAS LET UP ON WILLIAM R. HEARST

Wants to Know Whether Man He Denounced Along With Herrin Four Years Ago Has Become Good; Record Crowd at Selma.

Standing before an audience that filled the school park in Selma yesterday morning, Hiram W. Johnson called attention to the fact that Theodore A. Bell has aligned himself in the present campaign with William Randolph Hearst and the San Francisco Examiner and completely reversed his attitude of four years ago. For almost an hour, the people of that town sat and listened to the Republican orator.

Before other audiences in Hanford, Tulare and Visalia, later in the day, he amplified this inconsistency of Bell and last night at Visalia, before a large audience at the opera house, he charged Bell with inconsistency in his utterances against the Southern Pacific and its political allies, saying that the leader of the state Democratic party had experienced a change of heart since the campaign he made against Governor Hiram Johnson four years ago.

"The question is not where my opponent was four years ago, but where he is today," declared Johnson. "Through his four years of the four towns yesterday, Johnson was cordial to me and at the close of each meeting, leading Democrats in the various towns were seen to come up and publicly promise their support to him. Johnson will speak at 10:30 o'clock this morning at Exeter and at 11 o'clock at Lemoore. He will address the voters of Porterville at 12:45 and will make another talk at Delano at 2 o'clock. He will end his trip for the day and will also end his campaign in the San Joaquin Valley with a big meeting at Bakersfield at 8 o'clock tonight.

At Selma yesterday Johnson denounced the alliance between Hearst and Bell in the following language:

"Theodore A. Bell, where are you today?" asked the Republican orator. "If you have crawled to Hearst to get votes, have you not crawled to Herrin?"

"My adversary is now in alliance with William R. Hearst and the San Francisco Examiner and the other factor is not mentioned.

"Ye Democrats, if he crawls to one of these to get votes, don't you think he'll crawl to both?"

To connect further with his denunciation of Bell for aligning himself with William R. Hearst, Johnson quoted from a speech Bell made in Hanford in 1906, as follows:

"The time is coming when Herrin and William Randolph Hearst are going down to eternal perdition. I had rather go down to defeat without the support of Hearst and Herrin than to win with them."

Commenting on this declaration made by Bell in 1906 and his present attitude toward Hearst, Johnson said:

"Radical four years ago, Bell has become greatly modified. If he has fallen down, leave it to you, Democrats, to determine whether or not he is entitled to any votes. Greater than anything else is the taking of the government out of the hands of the railroad and returning it to the people, despite the fact that my adversary says the railroad is not dominant."

"Four years ago, my adversary drew a great line through the state of California. On one side he placed himself and on the other he placed William R. Hearst and William F. Herrin. Now I leave it to you to determine whether Hearst has come over this line or whether Bell has gone over. I leave it to you to determine whether Hearst

PACKERS QUOTING LOW FIGURES IN EAST

Bear Move Started by Naming November-December Goods at 5c.

HOUSES HERE QUIET

Important Centers Have Yet to Cover Thanksgiving Trade Demands.

Evidence of a distinct bear movement in the packing trade was shown by the fact that the leading packing firms of the coast are coming to light. They were mentioned last night in the latter part of last week and were mentioned yesterday in advices from Eastern brokers, saying that packing firms of this city, several of them, names not specified, are quoting choice seedling raisins at 4 cents per pound and fancy seedling at 4 1/2 cents per pound, for November and December delivery.

This is a reduction of practically a cent. It is put out for future delivery goods, at this stage of the market, with the intention, it is declared, of securing the trade that the goods will be cheaper later on, and that it would be a mistake to begin now to cover requirements.

An effort will be made to find out what firms are quoting figures in this way, and on what basis the quotations are being made as to confirmation, etc.

EVEN MONEY OFFERED THAT SAN FRANCISCO WILL GO FOR JOHNSON

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 24.—For several days past the betting at Corbett's poolroom has been 10 to 6 that Hiram Johnson will be the next governor. The odds were 10 to 1 in favor of Johnson, however, that the odds were forced to 2 to 1. There is no real money even at these odds. Corbett announced the following odds today:

- On the general result—Johnson, 2 to 1.
- Even money that Johnson's majority will be 35,000.
- Even money that Johnson will carry forty of the fifty-eight counties.

5 INDUSTRIAL WORKERS ARRESTED LAST NIGHT

No More Cots at Jail for Incoming Prisoners; 49 to Date.

Five Industrial Workers of the World were arrested last night for attempting to speak on the streets without a permit. They gave their names as W. S. Henderson, John Brinkley, Stephen Robinson, Charles Williams and Charles Miller. They were charged with disturbing the peace. They were jailed by Patrolmen Helms, Hays and Phipps.

William H. Little, a local carpet cleaner, who is secretary of the Fresno local of the Industrial Workers, yesterday pleaded not guilty of being drunk, and before Judge Judge Briggs demanded a jury trial. He was released on bail and his trial was set for Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Little was arrested Saturday night, and charged with intoxication.

The number of Industrial Workers in the jail now is forty-nine, and the organization threatens to send many more. The beds of the jail have been exhausted, and the authorities now face the alternative of buying beds for the future Industrial Workers seeking arrest, or not providing them with sleeping accommodations.

STAKES ARE SET OUT FOR STREET GRADING

Mariposa Avenue Widening From Sylvia to Belmont Next in Order.

Deputy City Engineer Cronkite set the stakes yesterday and Thompson Bros., the contractors, began work on the grading for 600 feet of Hills street between Fresno and Thoma for one block. Between these the block should be intersected by Howard, but that street has never been cut through. There is a considerable fill to make in connection with this part of the grading.

Stakes were also set for the grading of Mariposa street between Alice and McKnight, also for a block of 400 feet. This work augurs the opening at an early date, either by the city trustees or by the property owners, of Mariposa street to the full width of 60 feet for one quarter of a mile from Sylvia to Belpler and Budin & Kamp.

The work of repaving Mariposa and K streets where the old railroad tracks have been torn up has been temporarily suspended by order of the city engineer. The company had intended to repave with crushed rock foundation and asphalt surface which is considered durable, but the engineer insisted upon the general specifications for a concrete basis. The paving was suspended until the material can be had, which will be in a few days.

WHY?

We have grown to be the largest store in our line. Why? Because the people found our goods and prices right. We can afford to sell goods for less money. Why? Because we have the best location in town and the transient customers that are attracted by our show windows and prices more than help to pay our expenses—

Because it costs us less to sell $100.00 worth of goods than any one in town—

Because we watch our business and the market so closely that we buy large quantities at low figures. We visit the markets of this country, we go to look for good things and find them.

A Few of the Good Things That We Have:

- Morris Chairs from $5 up to $75.00
- Rattan Rockers, large size, well made, $3.00
- Sanitary Couch and Pad, both good, $7.00.
- Draperies for your windows as low as 15c yard.
- Carpet, sewed, lined and laid as low as 45c yard.
